All-New Composites One Website – Now Live Composites One Launches New Website to Composites Industry

Arlington Heights, IL, April 20, 2015...Composites One is proud to announce the launch of our newly redesigned website. The new Composites One website is a complete redesign with much more product and process information, technical data, supplier links, and other information regarding composites applications, manufacturing, and product sourcing. A mobile version is also available for those that prefer to use cell phones to search for product or process information.

“The all-new Composites One website represents the best in product and process information as well as the best technology has to offer.” said Marcy Offner, Director of Marketing Communications for Composites One. “The site is organized around our four core differentiators: People, Product, Process and Performance. We are very excited to present this educational tool to the industry.”

The new compositesone.com will not only provide more product and technical information than any other website in the industry, it will also offer visitors to the site easy access to Composites One representatives through interactive inquiries allowing each site visitor to provide detailed information about their request. Those submitting inquiries will be contacted within 24 hours of their request. Other features of the all-new compositesone.com include links to technical support, videos, related industry articles, and supplier partner features product pages.

Browsers of the site will also be able to link to b2bcomposites.com, the composites industry’s leading e-commerce site – allowing Composites One customers to conduct business 24-7.
